COLONEL BARRE'S SPEECH.

Mr. Speaker,

I Liſtened at the opening of the ſeſſion with great attention to the eloquent ſpeech delivered from the throne; and I muſt confeſs that I was as much pleaſed as inſtructed; pleaſed, becauſe the continuance of peace was announced from the higheſt authority, and inſtructed, becauſe I was till then a ſtranger to the pacific diſpoſition of Spain. Laſt year I knew that court only ſmothered its reſentment, becauſe France was in no condition to ſupport its act of violence. This year I little imagined that the final ceſſion of Falkland's Iſland would have rendered it more inclinable to be friendly, and to ſtretch out the olive-branch. But our miniſters have found out a new theory of the human mind; they have diſcovered that, when a nation has ſeen what it calls an injury confirmed, its paſſion neceſſarily ſubſides, and makes it all gentleneſs and peace. Such at leaſt is the doctrine, which they put into the mouth of their Sovereign. Reſpect for his character rendered me hitherto ſilent; but, now that the miniſters themſelves give him the lie, I can no longer obſerve the ſame maxim. This motion is a direct contradiction to the King's ſpeech. For why augment our number of ſeamen, if we could rely on the declarations of Spain? The augmentation would be an uſeleſs burden to the ſtate. But the fact is, that the actions of Spain correſpond by no means to its words. I can, from knowledge, affirm, that the Spaniſh navy is conſtantly upon the increaſe, and that every interior regulation of that ſtate diſcovers an evident tendency to revenge. Military diſcipline, the improvement of the marine, and the acquiſition of experienced ſeamen, are the perpetual objects of Spaniſh attention. Falkland's Iſland is, indeed, relinquiſhed; but what does this ceſſion prove? nothing but that the Houſe of Bourbon did not judge this the critical juncture for entering into a freſh war with Great-Britain. Has Spain yet dropped every claim of right to the conteſted ſpot? Neither the Gazette, nor the ſpeech, take any notice of this circumſtance. They paſs it over with the ſame prudential caution, which the ſpeech has obſerved with reſpect to other diſputable points. Will it be too great an indulgence of conjecture to conclude from this political ſilence, that the right remains yet undecided, and is reſerved by Spain as a convenient handle for altercation at a more favourable time? To men of ordinary ſagacity, to thoſe who do not ſee quite ſo far as the miniſtry, the matter has this aſpect. Was it then well done to paſs over ſo eſſential a point, and leave our natural enemies to chuſe their own time for fighting us? Our manifeſt ſuperiority would have dictated to common ſenſe the immediate and final adjuſtment of every quarrel, or the direct proclamation of war; eſpecially ſince they, the aggreſſors, offered no compenſation. It is therefore with a very ill grace that ſuch profuſe compliments are heaped upon that wiſdom, which preſerved us from the calamities of war. We are only treated by the miniſtry as victims reſerved, till they are fat, for the altar. The effects of their improvidence may be ſlow; but they will be ſure.

Let it not be imagined, becauſe I thus blame the conduct of the miniſtry in the quarrel with Spain, that I am an enemy to the augmentation. Though of opinion that, if, according to the King's ſpeech, war be at a diſtance, the augmentation is too great, and, if near at hand, too ſmall; though I allow that it will coſt the nation five hundred thouſand pounds a year, and that no argument can be advanced for ſuch an eſtabliſhment this year, which may not with equal propriety be advanced next year, yet muſt I ſtill be an advocate for the augmentation; becauſe I look upon our preſent ſtate as an armed peace. Europe cannot long remain in its condition. The flame of the Turkiſh war will, in all probability, ſpread in a ſhort time over Germany. Auſtria cannot, without jealouſy, behold the progreſs of Ruſſia; and the King of Pruſſia, with his great abilities, will not be troubled waters. When a proper opportunity offers, he will appropriate a portion of Poland, and ſquare his dominions. You think that in ſuch a general commotion we can remain quiet. We are now ſo pacifically inclined, France and Spain will force us into war. Indeed we, or at leaſt our ſailors, are already attacked by the latter. They are confined in dungeons, and treated with the moſt unexampled barbarity. Theſe are facts which I have from the moſt undoubted authority. Theſe are facts which muſt rouſe the reſentment of every Engliſhman. Theſe are facts which muſt call for reparation. Theſe are facts which muſt make us look upon our preſent ſituation as a ſtate of war.

LONDON, JANUARY 30.

MONDAY night was opened, for the firſt time, the moſt magnificent of receptacle of faſhionable pleaſure, the Pantheon, to a crowded company of between fifteen hundred and two thouſand people. Imagination cannot well ſurpaſs the elegance and magnificence of the apartments, the boldneſs of the paintings, or the diſpoſition of the lights, which laſt are reflected from gilt vaſes, ſuſpended by gilt chains. Beſide a number of ſplendid ornaments that decorate the rotunda, or great room, there are a number of ſtatues, in niches below the dome, repreſenting moſt of the Heathen Gods and Goddeſſes, ſuppoſed to be in the ancient Pantheon of Rome. To theſe are added three more of white porphyry, the two firſt repreſenting the preſent King and Queen, the laſt Britannia. The whole building is compoſed of a ſuite of fourteen rooms, all of which are adapted to particular uſes; and each affording a ſtriking inſtance of the ſplendour and profuſion of modern times. It is thought the company would have been ſtill more numerous, but the ſudden notice of the death of the Landgravine of Heſſe Caſſel, which prevented many from going, on account of not having been prepared with mourning, and which took off a great deal of that ſplendid appearance that might otherwiſe have been expected. In point of conſequence, the company were an olio of all ſorts; Peers, Peereſſes, Honourable, and Right Honourables, Jew-Brokers, Demireps, Lottery Inſurers, and Quack-Doctors.

FEBRUARY 15. The Empreſs of Ruſſia has ſent Lord Cheſterfield the code of laws lately drawn up for the government of her extenſive Empire. This code is printed in four different languages, and ornamented with a ſplendor perfectly ſuitable to the magnificence of the illuſtrious Catharine the Second.

The code of laws mentioned in the foregoing paragraph is not the only mark of favour which the Empreſs of Ruſſia has moſt graciouſly conferred upon this celebrated Nobleman. When he expreſſed his thanks for the former act of condeſcenſion, he indicated ſome wiſhes of obtaining a ſecond; and having, he ſaid, a picture of every Potentate in Europe in his poſſeſſion but her Imperial Majeſty's, hoped he might be permitted to enrich his collection with hers. The Empreſs on this intimation, repaired to an elaboratory where ſhe often amuſes herſelf with turning, and immediately executed a ſnuff-box of exquiſite workmanſhip for his Lordſhip; in which ſhe ordered her picture to be richly ſet, and ſent it to her Ambaſſador in London, to be properly delivered to the Britiſh Atticus.

In the picture ſent by the Empreſs of Ruſſia to Lord Cheſterfield, her Majeſty is painted in the ancient Roman habit; and, we are told, the court of Peterſburgh is the only court in Europe which diſdains a ſervile imitation of the fopperies of Verſailles.

FEBRUARY 22. On Thurſday the Hon. Charles-James Fox, ſecond ſon to Lord Holland, reſigned his place as one of the Lords of the Admiralty. The following is an authentic copy of the laconic letter which Mr. Charles Fox ſent to Lord North previous to his reſignation:

"My Lord,---You have groſsly inſulted me, and I will reſent it. I am, my Lord, your Lordſhip's humble ſervant,

C. J. FOX."

FEBRUARY 24. Yeſterday died the Right Honourable Lord Viſcount Mandeville, eldeſt ſon and heir apparent of his Grace the Duke of Manchester.

FEBRUARY 25. A petition of the Duke of Beaufort and othe honourable gentlemen, belonging to the Society of Free and Accepted Maſons, has been preſented to the Houſe of Commons, ſetting forth that they have given from voluntary contributions, to their diſtreſſed brethren annually upwards of 600l. for ſome years paſt, and are poſſeſſed of a fund of 1300l. bank annuities, beſides ready money not inveſted, and the grand fund for building a hall; that the ſociety have in contemplation to build a hall, and alſo alms-houſes for neceſſitous people; and in order to proſecute that good end, have prayed that leave may be given to bring in a bill for incorporating and making a body politic the ſaid ſociety. The houſe has granted their requeſt, and a bill is ordered in.

The whole military eſtabliſhment of the Britiſh colonies is to conſiſt of 13,000 effective men, excluſive of their militia.

FEBRUARY 28. It is reported that Lord Irnham will be appointed one of the Lords of the Admiralty, in the room of Mr. Fox.

They write from Paris, that the French Court are on the point of ſurrendering the kingdom of Corſica, to the Infant Duke of Parma for the ſum of 11,000,000 livres.

By a veſſel from Liſbon they adviſe, that the King of Portugal has juſt publiſhed an edict, prohibiting the importation of linens and woollens from France and Holland, and allowing them from England and Ireland duty free.

Letters juſt received from Copenhagen adviſe, that the King of Denmark has appointed two new Governors, to his ſettlements at Tranquebar and Danſburgh in the Eaſt-Indies.

MARCH 2. On Friday a very ſingular event happened in the Houſe of Commons. Governor Johnſtone offered to the Houſe a petition from an Armenian merchant, named George Cojomaul, complaining of the unparalleled cruelties he had ſuffered from the nominal Nabobs, and other ſervants of the Eaſt-India Company in Bengal, without ever being able to know of what crime he was accuſed, and begged ſome regulations of government for his future ſecurity, as well as the reſt of the miſerable inhabitants, who are equally expoſed to the ſame oppreſſions. The ſubject was opened with great perſpicuity, modeſty, and force, ſtating the tyranny that exiſted, and the neceſſity of ſome relief. The Houſe was uncommonly full, and liſtened with the moſt reſpectable attention; though moſt of the nabobs and directors, who are in Parliament, were preſent, yet they choſe to leave the impreſſions, which were made by Governor Johnſtone's ſpeech and the petition, uncontradicted; the petition was therefore brought up without oppoſition. As this is the firſt time Eaſt-India affairs have been mentioned, the expectations of all men were raiſed, and the Houſe liſtened with impartial concern. The diſcuſſion of this petition muſt bring all the great queſtions before the Houſe, concerning which the public have been ſo anxious for ſome time paſt,

MARCH 4. Mr. Sawbridge yeſterday made his motion for ſhortening the duration of Parliaments; he began as far back as the time of the Saxons, and gave a very good hiſtorical account of the duration of Parliaments under the different reigns; and at laſt came to the preſent; where he obſerved (having in ſome of the reigns taken notice of the improper uſe of prerogative) ironically, the proper uſes that may be made of prerogative, and ſaid, that now it was a proper uſe of prorogative to deny the diſſolution of Parliament, though at the requeſt of the conſtituents themſelves; that it was now a proper uſe of prorogative to iſſue an illegal proclamation. And then he went on with the ſame introduction of the proper uſe of prorogative, to the ſeveral acts that had been done contrary to law in the preſent reign, mentioning the Noli proſequi in the affair of the city laſt year; the proroguing of Parliament in Ireland; the refuſing mercy to the weavers that were condemned for a riot, though recommended by the court for mercy; the ſcreening people from trial for the murder in St. George's-fields; and many other things of the like kind, which he mentioned as being done in this reign; and which he termed, in an ironical ſtile, as proper uſe of prerogative, at leaſt thought ſo in theſe times. Mr. Townſhend ſeconded the motion, and ſaid, that his friend had moved it as a great conſtitutional queſtion, and he hoped it would be conſidered as ſuch; for he ſhould always conſider it as one of the greateſt that could come before that Houſe: To make elections frequent, would be to make them free; as his worthy friend and brother Alderman had ſaid ſo much upon the ſubject, he would content himſelf with ſeconding it. Mr. Cox got up and obſerved, that he could not think the honourable gentleman had gone far enough; that it was the corruption of the times that would prevent a free election; that had he moved, or could find out a way to abolish that, he would readily join him in the preſent queſtion; but while that ſubſiſted, he could not come into the preſent queſtion, as giving any proſpect of a more free election and repreſentation than at preſent. The Houſe divided, Noes 251, Ayes 83.

MARCH 7. Yeſterday the Lords Committee ſat on the Tea Bill.

The Lords of the Treaſury have now appointed three gentlemen jointly with John Temple, Eſq; to be Surveyors General of the Cuſtoms in England, at the ſalary of 400l. a year.

At a late Privy Council, meaſures were reſolved on (which are to be laid before the Parliament) for ſupplying the long-complained of want of a paper currency in the American colonies.

At a meeting of the Supporters of the Bill of Rights, it appeared, that 1500l. of Mr. Wilkes's debts remained yet unpaid.

The noted Dudley is admitted to plead "Guilty" to the indictment for perjury. His ſentence is left to the opinion of the twelve Judges. The trial of Britain for various forgeries will come on at Reading next week.

On the 23d of February, while Colonel Thomas Eyre was ſpeaking to a Bill before the Houſe of Commons in Ireland, he was ſeized with an apoplectic fit, and dropped down dead in his place.

Written EXTEMPORE, on the Return of SPRING.

STERN Winter with its dreary Train
At laſt reſigns the drooping Plain,
To Spring's reviving Ray;
Old Boreas too with hoſtile Roar
Reluctant leaves the rugged Shore,
And Peace reſumes its Sway.

Now DELIA view the pleaſing Scene,
The pendant Woods array'd in Green,
The Vales with Verdure crown'd;
The fleecy Flocks their Paſtures range,
The bleating Lam'kins bleſs the Change,
All Nature ſmiling round.

Thus all admire thy faultleſs Face,
Thy Perſon form'd with ev'ry Grace
That captivates Mankind.
Nor more, they own with fond Surpriſe,
The pleaſing Luſtre of thy Eyes,
Than Beauties of thy Mind.

Yet ah! my DELIA, ſhort's the Scene,
This Spring will vaniſh like a Dream,
Winter reſume its Sway.
Nor need my Fair One, need I name,
A recent Loſs, * too loud proclaims,
Life, Beauty muſt decay.

Since then Old Time, ſtill on the Wing,
No more regards the Smiles of Spring,
Than Beauties youthful Bloom;
Let us embrace the fleeting Hour,
Be happy, while 'tis in our Power,
Ere yet he fix our Doom.

Then may revolving Seaſons fly,
Or Wintry Frowns condence the Sky;
That Power, that we adore,
Will calm Content, and Bliſs beſtow,
Will make us happy here below,
And happy evermore.
